VOL. IV. GLENDALE, LOS ANGELES COUNTY, CAL., SATURDAY, MAY 2, 1908. No. 1

THE DUTY OF CITIZENS.

(By State Senator Chas. W. Bell, of Pasadena.)

When voters, by their failure to attend and assert their rights as citizens at the primaries, render it possible for a political bureau controlled by paid employes of a powerful corporation, to make or break candidates for public office, they fail to perform a sacred civic duty. As a result, candidates so selected must vote as directed by their political creators and not in accordance with the wishes of their constituents; because the same influence which put them into office will hold over them the club of future political defeat, or the promise of future political reward.

The "Sacramento Union," a staunch Republican newspaper, in an editorial at the close of the last regular session of the State legislature, stated: "There must be written across the record of this legislature in great, black, unseemly scrawl, the detestable word 'Subserviency,' than which there is no deeper damnation known among men."

The last State Republican platform contained this paragraph: "The nominees of the Republican party in the several senatorial and assembly districts are hereby pledged, if elected, to vote at the legislative session to convene in January, 1907, to cut off every unnecessary contingent expense and attachee not absolutely necessary to conduct the business of this session." How was this pledge carried out?

The last two regular sessions of the legislature have adopted resolutions approving an amendment to the State constitution to provide not to exceed $500 a day to each branch of the legislature for attaches. This is recognized as being ample and would amount to $30,000 for a sixty-day session in each branch of the legislature. The expenses of the senate alone for attaches in the last legislature were over $50,000, and the taxpayers of the State had to foot the bill. A great majority of these attaches were useless and unnecessary and many were wholly incompetent. From the very beginning, the influence of the Southern Pacific political bureau made itself manifest. The men who make themselves useful in primaries and conventions were carefully placed in lucrative positions.

Then the work of superintending legislation was apportioned. Walter Parker of Los Angeles and George Hatton of Oakland took charge of the assembly and Jere Burke of San Francisco looked after the welfare of the senate. They were punctual and faithful in their attendance in committee rooms, in the lobby and upon the floors of both the upper and lower house, and as was well and truthfully stated by one of the Republican papers: "Almost no single piece of legislation was considered, and almost no single roll was called, in which the members of either house could vote their free sentiments, because of the malign influence of these hired manipulators. Almost every vote cast showed some aspect of ownership, petty vengeance or legislative blackmail."

There were some good bills passed but many defeated, and there were a few bad measures defeated, but many passed. Almost every bill in which the Southern Pacific Railroad was interested, politically or financially, was passed.

The Los Angeles county convention adopted the following: "Resolved further, that, believing that pool-selling, bookmaking, and all kinds of race track gambling as carried on, are detrimental to good morals, we pledge our senators and representatives in the State legislature to secure State legislation prohibiting the same in the State of California." No attempt was made by the nominees of said convention to secure such legislation. I introduced such a bill which was buried in committee. In an endeavor to recall said bill, two senators from this county voted against the resolution, one voted for it, and one conveniently absented himself just before the matter came up.

If every voter in this State could have closely followed the roll-call on bills introduced, they would more clearly understand the necessity for a thorough house cleaning in the Republican party. There is neither excuse or necessity for the railroads to maintain a political bureau to corrupt legislatures. There is no enmity anywhere in the State against railroads as business enterprises. The people rejoice in their prosperity and take a real pride in their development. A demand that the railroads be subjected to the people's laws is no evidence of hostility. If legislators cannot be trusted to give the railroads a square deal, by what process of reasoning could it be assured that they have the capacity to act in legislating for the individual citizen. The Republican voters of the State ought to welcome the opportunity to join in an organized movement that will enable them to nominate candidates, who, if elected, will be free men and will truly represent their constituents.

The Lincoln-Roosevelt Republican League will make it possible for every citizen to register an effective protest against the Southern Pacific control of the Republican organization of the State.

VOTERS TAKE NOTICE.

Republican Primary elections will be held on Tuesday next, May 5th, from 12 m. to 6 p.m., to vote on delegates to attend the state convention at Sacramento, which will elect delegates to the national convention at Chicago. For this, the 67th assembly district, the Lincoln-Roosevelt Republican League has endorsed the following Republicans to represent its principles at the state convention:

R. P. Waite, San Fernando; H. C. Power, Santa Monica; A. F. Young, Sawtelle; R. E. Chase, Glendale; G. Edwards, Eagle Rock.

Republican voters who desire to assist in wresting the control of the party from the Southern Pacific railroad influence, should turn out on Tuesday next in their respective precincts and vote this ticket.

NEW CITY ENGINEER.

In appointing Mr. E. M. Lynch of Tropico to the position of city engineer of Glendale, we believe the trustees have made a wise selection. Mr. Lynch is a graduate of our State university at Berkeley and has had several years' experience in his profession. He is a young man of pleasing address and will, no doubt, take hold of the work in the proper spirit of enthusiasm with an ambition to carry out the plans made by his predecessor for the Glendale of the future. For we believe that the work done by Mr. Postle in the initial stages of our history as a city has been invaluable notwithstanding the criticism of it in spots by property owners who imagined their personal interests infringed upon.

TO THE PUBLIC.

The need of a place where the young people of Glendale could find exercise, amusement and healthful social life has been recognized by many of the people of this city for some time. In fact, for the past two years there has been some agitation of the question of providing such a place for them.

The time seems now to be propitious for bringing this matter to the notice of the public in general. Many who may not have been reached by the discussion of the subject up to this time would be sorry not to be included in so excellent a purpose and the cause would suffer from the lack of their co-operation. It is desirable that our whole population should be united in the noble work.

The executive committee of the Federated Brotherhoods which has been seeking to foster the movement thus far takes the liberty of calling a meeting for the purpose of electing a board of trustees to whom the raising of funds, the selection of a site, and all other questions regarding the consummation of the project may be committed.

It has seemed best to the committee to form a membership of those who are sufficiently interested in the project by asking a fee of five dollars as a requisite to the casting of a vote for the trustees.

It is not the intention to fix the membership fee at five dollars permanently. That will be left to the future and to the legally constituted board of control. This is merely established as a preliminary qualification for those who may take part in the starting of the organization.

The proposed name for the organization is the Young People's Christian Association of Glendale. It is proposed that the building that shall be erected and the advantages that shall be offered shall be open to both sexes under such regulations as shall secure the best interests of the community.

We would invite all who wish to join in this movement to meet at the Presbyterian Church on Tuesday evening, May 5th, to subscribe five dollars each, and cast their vote for trustees of the Young People's Christian Association of Glendale. We hope the meeting may be called to order promptly at eight o'clock.

For the executive committee,
S. LAWRENCE WARD.
Glendale, Cal., April 30, 1908.

RECIPROCITY DAY.

May 12th is to be a red letter day with the club ladies of Glendale. Upon that date they will have the honor of entertaining visiting members of other clubs who will come here to celebrate Reciprocity Day. A large number of visiting club women are expected and will be entertained by the ladies of the Tuesday Afternoon Club of Glendale.

The rooms of the Glendale Country Club have been secured for the occasion, which promises to be a notable one and will, no doubt, go far toward extending the fame of our town, the magnificent club house where the reception takes place and the hospitality of the ladies of Glendale.

NEW RESIDENCE.

On Mary street in the Glendalia Park tract, Mr. H. D. Salveter is about to commence the erection of a story and a half residence for Mr. A. R Taylor, a newcomer to Glendale from Los Angeles. The house will have a brick foundation and will cost about $2500.

THE BOND ELECTION.

That the vote for the High School bonds was large enough to carry the proposition through triumphantly, was due to the work done by the High School students of both sexes, more than to any other cause. A number of considerations entered into the question appealing to voters in different ways, so that judgment was affected (as is usually the case) entirely by the point of view. The work of the young enthusiasts, therefore, was to make voters see the question from the educational standpoint only, and in this they were remarkably successful. They need to be reminded, however, that they were accorded privileges at the polls which are not allowed at general elections, which are in fact proscribed by law. We do not understand whether the law or the officers of the election are responsible for the methods in vogue at the election of Tuesday, but there is no good reason why the voters' right to a secret ballot should not be secured in a bond as well as in a general election. There should have been but one ticket printed, bearing on its face both the affirmative and the negative vote, the voter showing his preference by scratching the one he did not wish to support. Instead of this there were two sets of ballots and the sharp eyes of the watchers could easily detect which one the voter selected and presumably voted. A voter could conceal his intention by taking one of each, but even that act rendered him an object of suspicion, and interfered with the entire freedom of action which should characterize an election in a Republic. These remarks are not made in a spirit of fault finding, but the young people were getting experience in political affairs which will affect their future action more or less and in their study of civics in its actual workings they should not get wrong impressions of political methods.

The polls at the High School building opened at 8 o'clock and from that hour until sundown a steady stream of voters poured into the voting place. There was but a small representation from outlying districts, but the voters of Glendale and Tropico were out in full force. A report to the effect that Tropico was going to vote against the bond issue and take steps to withdraw from the Union High School district, was happily disproved by the vote, although there were a few who evidently favored the suggestion. Feeling ran pretty high and some warm words were indulged in, but as a general thing voters deposited their ballots and went on their way inclined to submit loyally to the verdict whatever it might be. The total number of votes cast was 528; of these there were 381 for and 147 against. Two-thirds were required to carry the bonds and there were 29 to spare. By 3 o'clock the vote was counted and the boys proceeded to express their appreciation in the ways familiar to Young America Triumphant. It must not be inferred that it was the boys alone who "boosted" for the school; a bevy of girls served lemonade impartially all day long to thirsty voters at the polling place, and the wretch who after drinking the seductive mixture could go and vote "No," was undoubtedly "Fit for treason, stratagems and spoils."

Mrs. Gaylord and Mrs. Beals were in attendance at the sessions of the W. C. T. U. held in Pasadena from Tuesday to Thursday of this week.

GLENDALE, CAL., MAY 2, 1908

We grow in importance rapidly. This week we have decided to spend $50,000 for a High School and the Salvation Army has visited us.

We regret the passing of our sprightly contemporary, the Evening News of Los Angeles. It was independent and fearless. It fought a good fight for high ideals and in its brief career has done good. We wish the clever editor of the News, Mr. Sam Clover, success in his next field of endeavor.

There is food for thought in the statement which we find in the Christian Register, that "There are more suicides nowadays among the disgusted well-to-do than among the poverty stricken." We commend it to our Socialistic friends as a text. Perhaps poverty is not, after all, the worst and most unbearable of afflictions.

The total amount of taxes paid into the treasury of Los Angeles county for the fiscal year ending March 1st, amounts to over $5,000,000. This is a very large sum of money for the people of our county to contribute in a year that embraces a period of serious financial embarrassment. It is to be hoped that now that this drain upon our resources has been stopped, there will be a noticeable improvement in all the channels of trade.

The High School Bond Election

After a strenuous struggle, the election resulted in a victory for the proponents of the bond issue. Now that this matter has been decided it is to be hoped that all of our citizens will be able to agree that the best result has been obtained. In this, as in all public matters, it is the duty of the individual citizen to lay aside his personal preferences and be one of the majority in good faith after the supreme test has occurred. It is regrettable that any word has been spoken that leaves even a suggestion of bitterness, but that will pass away. Life is too short to permit of our lingering over the unpleasant feature of the road that we have passed over. There is better work awaiting us ahead.

Cigarettes On the Battleships

A gentleman who visited the flagship Connecticut while at San Pedro the other day, was impressed by the fact that a large proportion of the men connected with the vessel, and presumably that one is a fair sample of the fleet, are habitual cigarette smokers. From the highest officer down to the cabin boy, as he was informed, the habit is general.

We can scarcely believe that in our American navy where strict discipline is an absolute necessity, the unlimited use of cigarettes is permitted.

If a fleet of warships manned by habitual cigarette smokers, prove as efficient as we fondly believe that of Admiral Evans' to be, could we not maintain a similar efficiency and save the building of a few more warships by manning them with crews who have not acquired that seductive, nerve destroying and time consuming habit?

Sense and Sentiment

That fine quality of the mind which affects the emotions and leaves the reason untouched, is as essential to our complex human organism as is that colder faculty which enables us to judiciously weigh the value of an idea as applied to our national needs. In the well-rounded character, the two opposite poles of mental process, should be nicely balanced to produce those desirable results, which work together for the common good. Not the sentimental alone nor the cold-blooded materialist only can be accepted as the ideal citizen. But it is doubtless true that the extremists who represent these two mental processes, are necessary to each other. The sentimentalist is frequently an inspiration; he may have a magnificent disregard for practical details, but he can call attention to a wrong that needs to be righted and by his persistance compel the practical man of action to follow and do the work. Sometimes in public affairs it must be confessed that the sentimentalist seems to do a good deal of unnecessary work; the positive pole of the battery becomes over-heated and the negative has to be reinforced so as to restore the equilibrium: perhaps it becomes necessary at times to pour cold water on the over-heated machinery. These intervals between the readjustment of the relative value of the two poles of the dynamo, are apt to be periods of disquiet, marked by unpleasant minor features, which try the patience of the looker on who is confident he could make a better machine if he were happily (or otherwise) charged with that responsibility by the Master Builder. This, however, as a metophorical prefix, is sufficent. In current periodicals and the eastern press recently, quite a lively controversy has been waged over the question of vivisection. A New York journal in search of a sensational subject, published a number of illustrated articles tending to show that the experiments practiced upon dumb animals for the benefit of science, are barbarous and unnecessary. The specialists who belong to the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals Society and kindred associations took up the matter in support of the affirmative, while doctors and hard headed (and therefore hard hearted?) scientists and others, rushed to the defense of the practice. The result has been an interesting discussion, and doubtless in the end rabbits, guinea pigs and other such "small deer" will continue to be sacrificed as heretofore for the alleged benefit of the human race, but the general public will gather much knowledge and therefore some benefit. Along the same line of thought we come to an interesting experience contributed by a country of which we have little knowledge on account of its absorption by the greater empire of which it is a part.

We clip the following from the London correspondent of the New York Sun:

"There was an "epidemic" of crimes and violence in Wales during the late winter, with the result that at the recent assizes severe sentences of imprisonment were coupled with orders for the infliction of from a dozen to twenty-five strokes with the cat o' nine tails. This deterrent weapon of the law is seldom resorted to by English judges except where a community has been terrorized by a series of outrageous robberies with violence, and it has never failed to put an effectual stop to the operations of gangs of ruffians.

"This class of criminals dread a dozen strokes of the cat o' nine tails far more than five years of penal servitude. The cringing terror with which the convicted garroter always hears such a sentence is convincing proof of its complete efficacy. The soft hearted humanitarians who abound in this country are shocked by the use of such brutal methods, and the newspapers during the last fortnight have been flooded with letters of protest.

"Their arguments had no effect upon the judiciary, for the sentences to the cat continue to be pronounced by the Judges of the King's Bench, who at least base their judgement on better practical knowledge than the protesters possess. It is perhaps sufficient comment to say that violent crimes in Wales have entirely ceased."

Our sentimentalists have not been heard from in regard to this matter, but they doubtless will be, and it will probably be best that they should express themselves. Otherwise the apparent signal success of a kind of punishment which was more popular a century ago than now, might lead to a too general adoption of it. It is hard sometimes to believe that there is much virtue in the mawkish sentimentality exhibited for criminals in certain notable cases, but it is safe to assume that even this has its effect in deterring us from going too far in our methods of punishment for crime.

TUESDAY AFTERNOON CLUB.

The regular meeting of the Tuesday Afternoon Club was not "largely attended," which is a pity, as no more interesting program has been offered this winter than that given by Mrs. Alexander Mitchell and Mrs. C. H. Newton, both of North Glendale, their papers not only showing careful thought and study, but proving of genuine interest as well. "Grant's Administrations" was taken by Mrs. Mitchell, and the "Period of Reconstruction," by Mrs. Newton.

The report of Mrs. Dr. Bryant, chairman of the committee, having in charge Reciprocity Day on Tuesday, May 12th, gave the completion of about all the plans. Through the courtesy of the chairman the Country Club house was secured for that afternoon and a most charming reception and later, a musical program, will be given. This will be the most prominent social event planned for the current year by the club and will practically close the season, although there will be three more meetings.

On May 26th will occur nominations and election of officers for the ensuing year. Members are urged to remember the date.

LIFE IN TIME AND SPACE.

In contemplation of the stupendous facts and inferences of cosmic evolution we instinctively endeavor to discover what relation it all bears to the mysterious phenomenon we call life. We naturally wish to know where we come in. In comparison with the almost infinite ages and boundless space through which these sublime developments of nature operate, life, in any form with which we are acquainted, seems to occupy so short a period of time, and so small a place in the great scheme, as to appear utterly insignificant. We know that life is only possible in certain conditions, depending mostly on a limited range of temperature, which occur as merely a passing incident in the great drama of stellar evolution. The earth is the only scene of life of which we have any absolute knowledge. As to its existence on other planets, we can only guess by inference. It is certain that no life could exist in the original firemist when the materials of the whole solar system formed one vast nebula; nor could any exist when the earth had cooled to its molten stage. Even when a solid crust had formed on its surface, untold ages must have elapsed before it was sufficiently cooled to permit the existence of life. But as soon as conditions became favorable life made its appearance in great abundance and variety. Whence came it? We might naturally infer that it was evolved from inert matter; and we are not in a position to say that it was not so. But we can say that there is not a particle of evidence of it. Less than fifty years ago it was generally believed that life could be, and in fact, was constantly developed from inert matter, by what was called "spontaneous generation." One of its foremost advocates, Dr. Bastian, thus stated this hypothesis: "Both observation and experiment unmistakably testify to the fact that living matter is constantly being formed de novo, in obedience to the same laws and tendencies which determine all the more simple chemical combinations." This statement called to the investigation the highest authorities of biological science, and Professor Tyndall and several other highly trained experimenters found the error in Dr. Bastian's experiments. So far as science can settle the question it is practically closed. Spontaneous generation has had to be given up, and it is absolutely certain that at the present time, at least, every form of life, both vegetable and animal, owes its existence to the operation of pre-existing life. Prof. Huxley conceded that the doctrine of biogenesis, or life only from life, "is victorious along the whole line at the present day." Prof. Tyndall said: "I affirm that no shred of trustworthy experimental testimony exists to prove that life has ever appeared independently of antecedent life." This is the last word of science on the question, for although Huxley and Tyndall reached their conclusions many years ago, nothing has since occurred to reverse the judgment. In their day science was much more materialistic than at present, and spontaneous generation seemed to fit in exactly with prevalent ideas of the continuity of nature. But these great men were eminently fair and candid, they sought truth only.

The prehistoric rocks furnish testimony of the existence of life in remote ages, beginning with the lowest forms, and exhibiting a constant advance in character until the appearance of the human race. To quote the poet Tennyson:

"Many a million of ages
Have gone to the making of man."

As to the great problem of the origin of life we are entirely without any guide, and if we assume it to have been due to a special creative act, there is no fact in science to controvert that position, which today seems to hold the field against any other assumption.

It is true that our experience of life is limited to that existing on this earth, but when we reflect that every star we can see is a sun, with probably accompanying planets, we must imagine that there are at the present time hosts of planets where conditions are similar to those existing on the earth. In such conditions life will inevitably appear.

To the reflective student of nature the idea arises that the whole wonderful scheme of cosmic evolution has been but a preparation for the abode of life in all its marvelous manifestations. The human race seems to represent the advance guard in the great process of evolution; its operation, however, appears to have passed from the physical to the mental and intellectual plane, so far as mankind is concerned. The evolution is still in progress, however, and in the prophetic words of the evangelist, "It doth not yet appear what we shall be." But viewing the path along which we have advanced, we may look forward with confidence to continued conquests of material nature, towards mental and spiritual perfection. So it may not be unreasonable to anticipate in imagination that far-off time when, having attained complete independence of physical conditions we may contemplate with indifference the dissolution of our planetary abode.

AN AFTERNOON WITH BOOKS.

On Wednesday afternoon a most interesting affair was in progress in the prety home of Mrs. L. A. Monroe, Fourth street, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of First Presbyterian church.

Guests represented titles of books. Some were so original as to represent two and even three books. Guessing commenced at once. While the judges in secret conclave pored over the cards, a dainty collection was served with hot tea and delicious home-made bon-bon accompaniments.

Mrs. Daniel Campbell, Mrs. G. D. Gillelan and Mrs. M. P. Harrison were the judges. Mrs. S. Lawrence Ward received the first prize, a handsome book, "A Girl of the People," for guessing the highest number of titles, twenty-one; and Mrs. G. E. Williams first prize for most original costume, a book of humorous adventure.

Many of the costumes were very attractive and bright ideas abounded. Had there been an award for beauty Miss Irene Ward, in a quaint lavender silk, with duchesse point fichu, would perhaps have been the winner. Little Mary Elizabeth Anderson held court all the afternoon as "Anderson's Fairy Tales" and also as "Sis Hopkins."

Following are some of the titles represented:

CITY TRUSTEES.

All members present. The rules were suspended and a communication received from H. R. Postle tendering his resignation as city engineer. On motion received and placed on file.

A communication was received from Frederick Baker tendering his resignation as city attorney. Same action taken. Mr. Baker made an oral report on the petition of Mabel L. Hackman regarding lot 85 of Watt's Subdivision of Rancho San Rafael, requesting that same be allowed to be withdrawn from the corporation of Glendale. The clerk was instructed to take action in accordance with this recommendation.

On motion the resignations of the city engineer and the city attorney were accepted.

On motion a vote of thanks was extended to these retiring officials for their efficient services. Mr. F. R. Sinclair's resignation as street superintendent then received and accepted.

Trustee Watson offered a resolution No. 139, appointing Mr. Edward M. Lynch city engineer for the city of Glendale, and same was unanimously adopted.

Trustee Cole offered resolution No. 140 appointing F. R. Sinclair street superintendent of city of Glendale. Unanimously adopted.

On motion the bonds presented by Harry M. Miller, city marshal, and G. B. Woodberry, city clerk, and the bond of T. W. Doyle, city treasurer, now on file, were approved.

SALVATION ARMY MEETING.

The Salvation Army came out to Gelndale on Tuesday evening, sixteen strong, nearly all having instruments of music, and held a meeting in the open air on the corner of Fourth street and Glendale avenue, opposite the drug store, and made things lively there for about an hour, when the proprietor of the drug store invited them in and treated them to ice cream. The probability is they will send some officers out here in the near future to establish the work here if they can secure a hall or some place to hold meetings in.

The serious attention given these earnest workers speaks well for the character of our Glendale young people particularly, who were out in full force.

NEW CITY ATTORNEY.

J. N. Metcalf, Esq., who was appointed city attorney for Glendale by the trustees at their meeting last Wednesday evening, is a resident of our city with offices at present in Los Angeles. Mr. Metcalf was a resident of San Diego for ten years and served a term of four years in that city as assistant district attorney, and also as attorney for the State board of harbor commissioners. He removed to Los Angeles four years ago and became associated with ex-State Senator Del Valle and Frank R. Finleyson in law practice.

Mr. Metcalf will no doubt prove an able counsellor for the city and will prove an important factor in the upbuilding of Glendale.

Made by Lung Bath Manufacturing Company (Incorporated), Minneapolis, Minn.

Mr. A. Larson, 2000 E. Franklin St., Minneapolis, Minn., last fall was given up to die by the city hospital, and ordered into the incurable ward. He desired to go to the State Tuberculosis Hospital at Walker, Minn., but could not, since incurables were not received. As a last resort his friends secured for him a "Lung Bath" in January of the present year. This opened up some very bad places in his lungs, and it being the office of the "Lung Bath" to clear these out, which it did, and now he is a comparatively well man, able to go to work. There is hope for you; do not delay.
